Why Veterinary Dental Technology

Dental Technology is the art and science of preserving and restoring the gnathostomatic system. It must fulfill the functional, esthetic and phonetic requirements of the patient and implant to the system immunity to disease.

As experts in tooth anatomy and morphology, we understand that animals are special patients. They are just as prone to food impactions, periodontal disease, and restorative failures as their human counterparts. However, veterinary dentistry presents a special challenge requiring unique consideration of crown to root ratios, areas of food tables, proximal contours, steepness of cusps, and harmony of associated parts.

The total efficiency of animal dentition and the high material stress involved also present special challenges. Material selection and restorative designs must minimize the amount of stress imparted to the remaining tooth structure and surrounding tissues. We carry the highest quality material and latest equipment to meet these challenges.
